

Joint Felicitation Letter of Support for the success of Bangladesh Movement From Myanmar Revolution Forces and Civil Society Organizations

No. 1 (8) / 7 / 24

16 August 2024

We commend and recognize the efforts of student and youth groups, as well as the broader public in Bangladesh, for their persistent revolutionary movements advocating democracy, human rights, freedom of expression, and civil liberties. Their dedication and activism over many years have played a crucial role in addressing these critical issues, ultimately culminating in the recent resignation of Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina. This achievement marks a significant step forward, and we celebrate their unwavering commitment to the promotion of fundamental rights and democratic values.

In response to the demands of student, youth, labour, and farmer groups in Bangladesh, we extend our best wishes to the interim government led by Nobel Peace Laureate Dr. Muhammad Yunus and his advisory team. At the same time, we express our hope that they will successfully address the significant responsibilities they have undertaken and effectively fulfill their roles during this critical period of transition.

Similarly, we earnestly urge the interim government of Bangladesh to collaborate with the National Unity Government of Myanmar and the ethnic resistance organizations to support democratic and human rights movements.

We, along with those who sacrificed their lives in the Myanmar Spring Revolution, extend our deepest respect and honor to the more than 500 students, youth, and civilians who fell victim to violence and repression in the past week.

The Myanmar Spring Revolution forces aim to ensure accountability for the abuses committed by successive regimes and seek to uphold justice. Similarly, we hope that the leaders of Bangladesh's independence struggle will continue to succeed in their efforts to secure justice for the numerous victims of violence and repression, including students, journalists, and human rights activists who have been persecuted. We wish them continued success in advancing democracy, human rights, and freedoms.

We draw significant lessons from the non-violent movements of students, labours, farmers and public in both Myanmar and Bangladesh, as well as from the balanced actions of armed resistance groups in their struggles for democracy, human rights, and liberation.

Leaders of democratic, human rights, and liberation movements must themselves reflect on and carefully consider the lessons from the vicious cycles of repression and abuse perpetrated by those who sought to suppress these very movements.

The efforts of Bangladeshi students, youth, labour, and farmer groups, which aim to establish a political system where armed groups are under civilian control and where civilian governments are held accountable while guaranteeing democracy and human rights, are seen as aligned with the objectives and goals of the Myanmar Spring Revolution.

In the struggle to eradicate all forms of autocratic government, including military regimes, and in the pursuit of establishing a federal state, we also anticipate that the people of Bangladesh and their emerging leadership will fully support and stand in solidarity with the people of Myanmar.

We extend our deep gratitude to the people of Bangladesh and their officials for providing humanitarian assistance and shelter to the Rohingya who have fled to Bangladesh due to the violent military operations in Myanmar. We also trust that the emerging government will work together with the National Unity Government of Myanmar and the respective groups representing the Arakan region to find the best solutions for the Rohingya people.

Our Myanmar Spring Revolution forces and civil society organizations are committed to ending military and all forms of autocratic or dictatorial regimes, combating chauvinism and patriarchy, ensuring accountability for perpetrators, and seeking justice for victims. We express our deep desire to join forces with Bangladeshi students, youth, labours, farmers and public in this struggle. Additionally, we extend our heartfelt congratulations and admiration for the achievements of the students and people of Bangladesh.
